

Opposition To Wind Farms Increases In Scotland

Opposition to wind farms is increasing in Scotland with the Highland council expected to cut the number of potential wind farm sites from its blueprint for renewable energy schemes. Anti-wind farm campaigners have been lobbying councillors to cap the number of approved wind farm sites as developers push to establish enormous wind farm parks with hundreds of turbines. Once a renewable strategy has been agreed it will become the planning blueprint for deciding where renewable energy projects are located in the region. The draft plan detailed 11 areas in the Highlands which were to be amenable to wind farm projects. Seven of those sites were expected to be dropped when the council voted on the issue this week.

[Source ESAA]